PALMER & WILLIAMS' Reaper & Self-Raker, 1853, patented in 1851, attracted much cordially with England and France. attention. It required but a single person to work it, as by an ingenious, vet simple arrangement, the grain is laid off at the side in on the 26th of June, denying that she wishes gavels in such size as the driver chooses to war and throwing the whole blame of the deliver thom. In the partially lodged grain, conflict, if one comes, upon the shoulders of Wednesday, an acre was cut in 42 minutes; the Ottoman. in the standing wheat, Thursday, in 36 minutes. The delivery of the grain was very good on Thursday. Manufactured at Brockport; price $138. The simplest constructed Reaper on the ground was Hussey's Improved Patent by BALL, AUTMAN & Co, Canton Ohio. It does its work very rapidly, cuts clean, and is not liable to get out of repair. A driver and raker are required, the gavels are laid off evenly in the rear, but it is necessary that the binders should follow the machine so as to remove the grain before the horses return for another clip. The acre of partially lodged grain was cut in in 37 minutes; the standing on Thursday in 33 minutes. The Hussey Reaper has been tested for years, is popular with farmers, and finds a ready market.

ATKIN'S Automation, or Sell-Raking Reaper and Mower, attrancted the attention of everybody whenever in motion. It comes nearer to a human reaper than anything made with hands, and does its work fast and well. It was tried successfully in the hurvest of 18-52 in the vicinity of Chicago, and was awarded first premiums at several State and other Exhibitions. The striking feature of the machine is an automation arm, terminating in a rake, which seizes the grain as the raper moves along, and by a rotary movement lays the gavel off regularly at the side, then extending itself, returns to its work, reminding one strongly of the active intelligence exhibited by the power printing press in laying off the printed sheets The Self-Raker scatters the grain somewhat in disposing of the gavels, but not much more than the machine rakes by hand; and it is less work to glean and bind after the Automation than after the common cradle. It is the invention of Mr. ATKINS, an old millwright at Chicago, who has been bedridden for ten yeas & never saw his remarkable piece of mechanism in operation. The Automation has been patented in England. Price at Chicago $175,00. It is not warranted as a Mower, but works very well as is said.

After a full and fair test of all the Reapers exhibited, the, Committee, as we understand, unanimously awarded the first premium, a gold medal of the value of $50, to SEYMOUR & Morgan's New York Reaper. No second premium was awarded, the Committee being divided in opinion between PALMER & WILL-IAMS' Reaper and Self-Roker, and Hussey's Improved Patent Resper, by BALL, AUTMAN & Co. The world-famous McCormick Rea-
